The Company Mania. The opening weeks of the present year find the investing public in temper and circumstances very different from those in which they passed the earlier months of 1865. In the last-named period there was a plenty if not a picthora, of money. and its possessors sought for fresh methods of employing it with characteristic ardour and discrim nation. As usual at such times, the warnings of past experience were forgotten or disregarded The severe lessons taught by the crashes and collapses of former times, the expertation fever of 1856, the railway monia of 1845, the South Sen Bubble and its subsidiary swindless, were all as completely ignored as if they had never been. The real the genuine philosopher's stone had been found at last. Limited Liability was to be the universal aurilier, the talisman which was to chithe existence with fresh obserms, and to trans- water freulago. form the shareholding world into a fool's paradise wherein every one was to get rich without trouble or exertion, in which the need for such old-fashioned qualitiei as patience und preserverance, judge ment and discrimination, care and providence, was to exist no longer. As always happens, there were plenty ready to foster these fond delusions. When multitudes are pressing forward to put their money into other people's custody there will be no) lack of good-natured folk ready enough to assume the responsibility for an adequate con-ideration. Hence it was that the promoter's profession took so sudden and surprising a start that bunkrunt attorneys' and seedy men about town were able to live in Belgravian manaions and appear in the nark as owners of arristocratic-looking | GODOWNS, Tea Hong &c. equipage bought with the princely sums they bad regeived as promotion money. Naturally enough the rulons of this new nobility spoke well of the system by which they made their gains. Limited Liability was to work a revolution in every wave and busi ness. The great private firms were to disappear by a process of absorption, and the small ones by their ever augmenting inability to stand against company-competition. But the companies themselves could not go wrong. They were formed on a new basis, and built up with new materials Mercantile firm. The grand principle of nutual association was to receive from them its most glorious and trium phant vindication. They were to surpare all the the achievements of former years entirely into the thale. In short, Limited Linbility was the moto recure us the gratification of our utmost wishes. Offices, Stables and Gedowns. the realization of our most extravagant and ramantic dreams of enurmous dividends rom safe investments, wealth won without work deubled without risk, enrued without exertion, received or Mesers Augustine Heard & Co.'s Compradors and speut alike without thought of an evil day.

To those who have watched the progress of the last new mania the present condition of the share market will cause no surprise We are now feel ing the rebound of the reakless succulation of the last two years; the period in which no represent. ntion was too absurtd to be put forward in a and ; no amount of money too large for them to Simmsten & Co. subscribe. It is an every-day practice with promoters to start soliemes of whose success ion same man would ever dream, but which i they were, nevertheless, able to introduce under the prestige of helf a dozen good names. Nor was the public behin hand in supplying them with inducements to continue the work of compuny manufacture. From week to week and from menth to mouth the intelligent' British citizen's money was for ever burning a hole in his pocket. He could get no rest until he had posted his letters of application, or rushed down to Capelconst to buy shares, that would have been dear at Provy discount, at a premium to which the rigfirs of the market had forced them op. The inextable results are those from which we are now of discount have roughly reminded us of what is or may be coming. The contraction of credit consequent upon this dearness of money is sure to bring down a considerable number of weak and tettering concerns, just as the first wintry, wind onts off the least hardy flawers. A comparison of the quotations on Change shows an almost universal tondancy downwards since this time last | L the WANCHI WHARF; with or without year, inpresenting an aggregate loss of £5,000,000 | use of the Wharf now completed, where vessels or £3,000,000 in miscellangous undertakings alone, can be ladened and discharged. On a cursory glanco we should say that considerably more than half of the new companies are quoted below par, while some bave fallen so low that their present owners are willing to lose their meney and pay 25 per cent, additional to get rid of their liability to future, calls. It is hardly necessary to point out that all these evils lines no promesery, ounnection with

To affirm the existence of the thing which is not is somewhat hexardous, though it is quite true that there are many premoters who do not mind running the risk. These are mere matters of opinion about which men may reasonably differ, and therefore no one, or we should rather any no promoter, can i do himself much barm by committing himpulf to them. He knows very well that the public are by no means critical in their ax- and at present in the occupation of Measure amination of his representations, and that they ELMENHORST and SANDER. weldern ask themselves whether the foots stated are fallacious or the inferences drawn from these facts unsound. When they road that the idea is to take over the old-established business o Mesars' Slawcoach, or the flourishing trade of Masers Go-the-pace, he is well aware that investors generally will never ask whether the first firm list day of January pext. had not dropped hopelesely behind the time, or whether the name of the second is well-known in lissinghall street. They will see that " a moderate sum is to be paid for goodwill," and they will not trouble themselves to inquire on what basis this aum is calculated or how it is to be paid. And in like manner throughout the list. The in tending shareholder goes for in a new bank without asking whether it is wanted; for a tes-growing estate without knowing where it is situated for all kinds of manufacturing concerns, without the slightest knowledge of the processes employed the risks run, or the markets supplied. Articles of association be never looks at; a check of any. kind upon the duings of directors, managor, or thuars, he never imposes until the tide of luck turns against him. Then, indeed, be is all indigmation, fu y, rage, and despair; calling for condiga punishment upon the authors of his mistortunes, and religiously resulving never to bouch a share again. In both extremes -that of undispriminating confidence and anreasoning distrust he is equally mistaken. Through the first stage he has already passed, and he is now passing or about to pass through the second. He has had "the hot fit" already, but not till " the cold fit ' is over will be arrive at that golden mean in which
